

Examples of Precorrection

Precorrections are reminders of desired behaviors to a student, prior to a problem behavior occurring. Precorrections can be used as academic, behavioral, or social-emotional reminders.

Academic Reminders

- "When reading an unfamiliar word, remember to point to the first letter and say it's sound."
- "I have posted the materials needed for this science lab on the board. Who would like to demonstrate for the class the setup procedures for the lab? -"Thank you, Eric. Jenna, will you please read each item from the board to Eric as he prepares his lab station?"
- "Class, when you get your microscopes for this experiment, what's the first thing we need to do?"

Behavioral Reminders

- "Sonya, we are about to all go sit in our carpet spots, so remember to walk and keep your hands and feet to yourself, showing responsibility."
- "It's almost time to walk down to PE. Who can remind us of one way we show respect in the hallway?"
- "In order to line up for lunch, raise your hand if you can tell us one way to be responsible in the cafeteria?" - "That's correct, push in your chair, walk to the door, and form a line."

Social-Emotional Reminders

- "Just a reminder to listen carefully to opposing arguments as we prepare for mock trial."
- "When we talk about how the characters in our book resolved conflicts, who can tell me which character did the best showing empathy?"
- "As we head to the playground, remember our problem solving skills we discussed in class. If a problem comes up on the playground, what are some ways we can solve it?"
